GEOLOGY

Erratically occurring copper-zinc mineralization in a badly shattered quartz vein cutting horizontal shale beds. The quartz vein averages about 4 feet in width.

DEVELOPMENT

Development consists of a 200-foot vertical shaft in the hanging wall and a 165-foot incline shaft on the vein. These two shafts are connected by about 250 feet of drifts and crosscuts on the 165-foot horizon. A 50-foot winze has been sunk from the 165-foot level. Mineralization is extremely low grade.

No ore reserves.
