The property is owned by L.G.Sanda, and is located at the head of Iron Canyon about 12 miles west from Battle Mountain, Lander County, Nevada.

The accompanying section shows the geology of the deposit, the location of the samples taken, and the assay results obtained.

The quartzite brecciated zone is traceable for a considerable distance, and is covered by this property for about two claim lengths.

No drifting has been done on the tunnel level although the ore is soft and easily mined here. The assay returns are a little lower than the figures advanced by the owner of the mine.

The property has a fair location for mining purposes, but is not so fortunate in owning a favorable millsite. Also there will be considerable difficulty in getting water for milling purposes.

Terms

A total price of $100,000 with no cash for the first year.

Conclusions

The value of the ore - as indicated by the two samples taken - is too low-grade to warrant further consideration of the prospect at the price asked.

It is probable that the cementing material carries the gold contained in the ore - and that coarse crushing and screening might give a fines product of good working grade.
