LOCATION.

The property of the TONOPAH MERGER EXTENSION MINING COMPANY comprises about three hundred acres of mineral bearing ground adjoining the TONOPAH MERGER MINING COMPANY estate lying north and northwest from their shaft, distant about two claims. On the south, joining a group belonging to George Wingfield, President of the Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company; to the north of us the Champ Clark Group.

The property of the TONOPAH MERGER EXTENSION MINING COMPANY is located on the same contact that has been found to run through the Belmont, Montana—Tonopah and Tonopah Mining Companies property, and can be readily traced on the surface from those properties through the whole length of the properties of the TONOPAH MERGER EXTENSION MINING COMPANY.

DEVELOPMENTS.

The late development on the Tonopah Merger shows six feet of ore averaging from $40 to $50 a ton. Through this ore body are stringers of rich ore, one of which will assay over $1000 a ton. The Company is now cutting a station on the 1070-foot level. During the last ten days the North Star on the 1250-foot level has struck a remarkable ore body, in that it carries almost as many ounces of gold as silver to the ton, while the general ratio is one ounce gold to 100 ounces of silver. Four feet now exposed will average $250 a ton.

The Jim Butler has struck rich ore on the 600-foot level and the Montana has opened up more new ore bodies. The whole camp has advanced over 100 per cent this year. The area has widened out and a number of new companies have started development work, some as far as three miles east of the Belmont and four miles west of the Tonopah Merger.

FORMATION.

Most of the proven mines of Tonopah have had to first go through the cap rock or later andesite to depths of 150 to 800 feet, then striking what is known as the Tonopah-Rhyolite-Dacite, in which the ore zone is found. It has been estimated that the TONOPAH MERGER EXTENSION MINING COMPANY will have to sink between 500 and 600 feet before striking the ore zone on its property.

To the north of our property on the Champ Clark group a strong vein crops to the surface and judging from the showing there it leads us to believe that the cap rock on the TONOPAH MERGER EXTENSION MINING COMPANY is not as deep as on the properties at a lower elevation.

FUTURE POSSIBILITIES.

From all indications, all that is necessary to develop another great mine in the northwestern part of the camp is to sink down to the ore zone. Our company intends to start work immediately and sink a double compartment shaft until we have struck the veins that are running through our property.

Mr. E. M. Luckett, one of the heaviest owners of the North Star and prominent mining man, has the following to say about our property:

TONOPAH, NEV., Sept. 30, 1912.

To the Directors of the Tonopah Merger Extension Mining Company:

GENTLEMEN:

After carefully going over your property I consider the same as one of the best undeveloped pieces of property in the Tonopah District.

E. M. LUCKETT.
